Log everything typed on your computer

Revealer Keylogger is a simple, easy-to-use keylogger that records everything that's typed into the computer.

Revealer Keylogger works surprisingly well. Under a rather simple interface we find a tool that can hide itself (so that users don't notice they're being logged) and record absolutely everything that you type, from a simple text document to the user-names and passwords (without asterisks) entered on any website.

We did find a flaw in the program though. When logging data, Revealer Keylogger disappears from the desktop and system tray, but still shows an active process in the Task Manager that more advanced users will easily spot.

Logs in Revealer Keylogger are saved as TXT files. The program includes other configuration options that remain inactive to encourage you to buy a pro version of the program.
