

WIRED - The Latest in Technology, Science, Culture and Business

By Condé Nast

Archived: 2026-04-05 22:24:21 UTC

Today's Picks

Trending Stories

A WIRED analysis of DHS records identified dozens of specialized federal agents who used force against US civilians during the largest known deployment of its kind in US history.

By Ali Winston and Maddy Varner

Amid mass displacement and collapsing trust in institutions, digital wallets are becoming critical conduits for aid, connecting diaspora donors directly with communities on the ground.

By Carla Sertin

When Syrian government accounts were hijacked in March, the breach looked chaotic. But it revealed something more troubling: a state struggling with the most basic layer of cybersecurity.

By Danny Makki

By Miles Klee

By Will Knight

By Jason Parham

By Will Knight

By Marta Musso

By Miles Klee

By Luca Nardi

By Makena Kelly

By Andrew Coutts

By Alana Hope Levinson

In this episode, we discuss Iran's threats to target US tech firms, gear up for the midterm elections, and get a scene report from the Polymarket pop-up bar in DC.

By Brian Barrett, Zoë Schiffer, Leah Feiger, Makena Kelly, and Kate Knibbs

For months, lone vibe coder Rafael Concepcion has obsessively built tools to counter the federal immigration crackdown—pivoting as he’s been outmatched. He’s also lost his job and become a target.

By Brendan I. Koerner

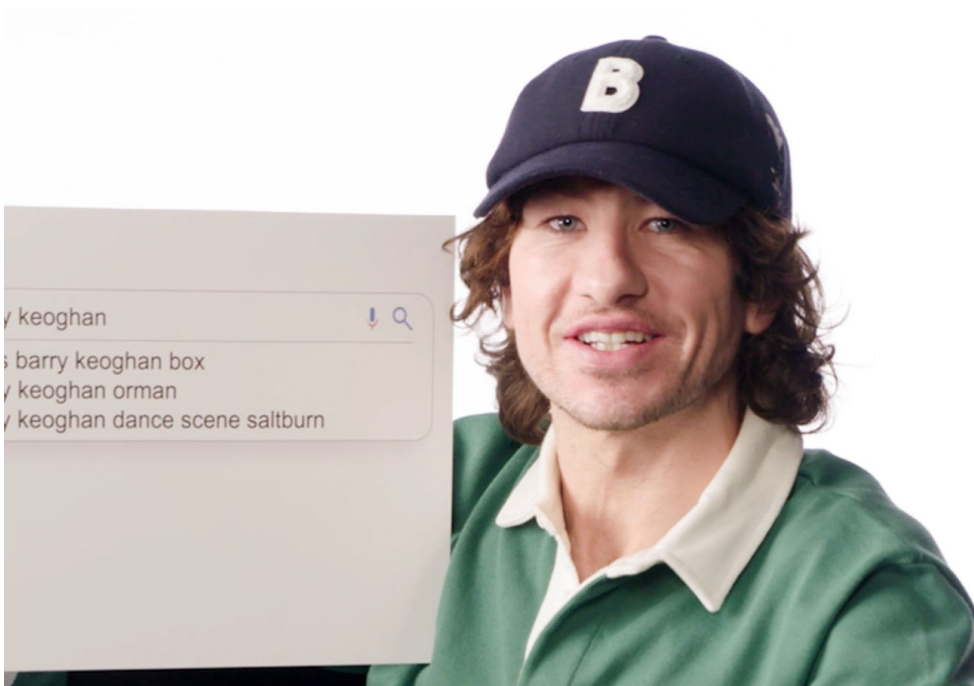

As Cursor launches the next generation of its product, the AI coding startup has to compete with OpenAI and Anthropic more directly than ever.

By Maxwell Zeff

WIRED reports from the front lines, at home and abroad.

Originally published December 2018: In 1988 a bomb downed a jet in Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 in the first major attack on Americans. Robert Mueller, then the head of the Justice Department’s criminal division, oversaw the case. For him, it was personal.

By Garrett M. Graff

icon

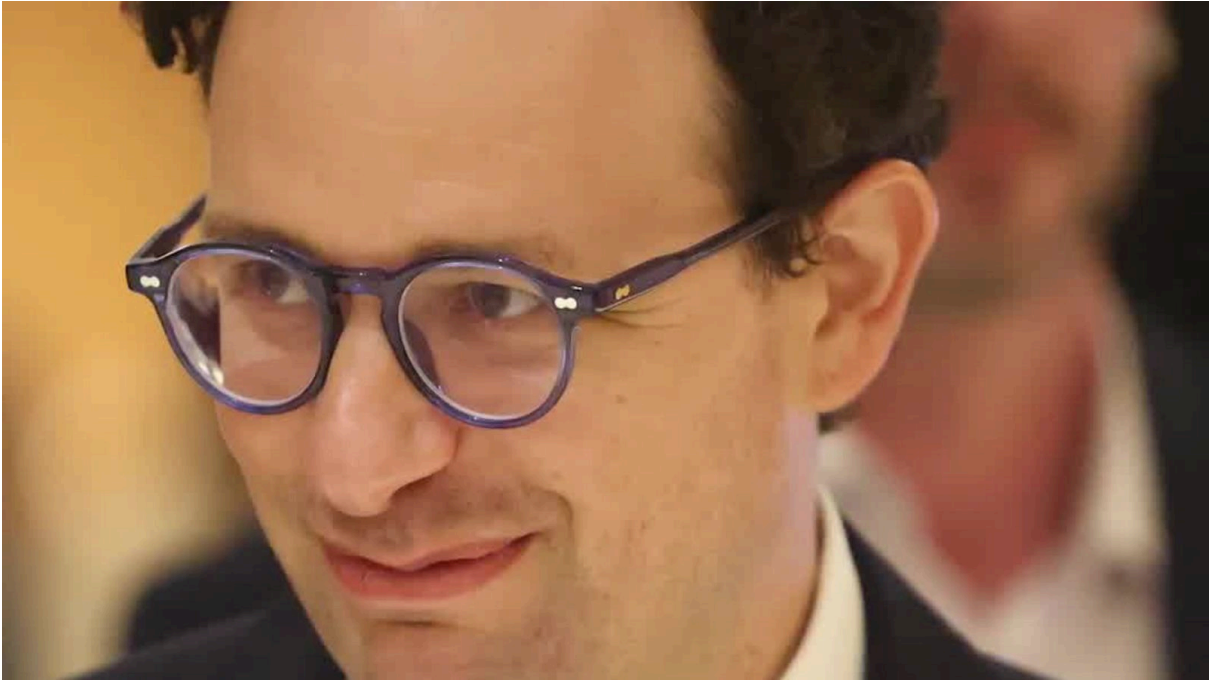

icon

icon

icon

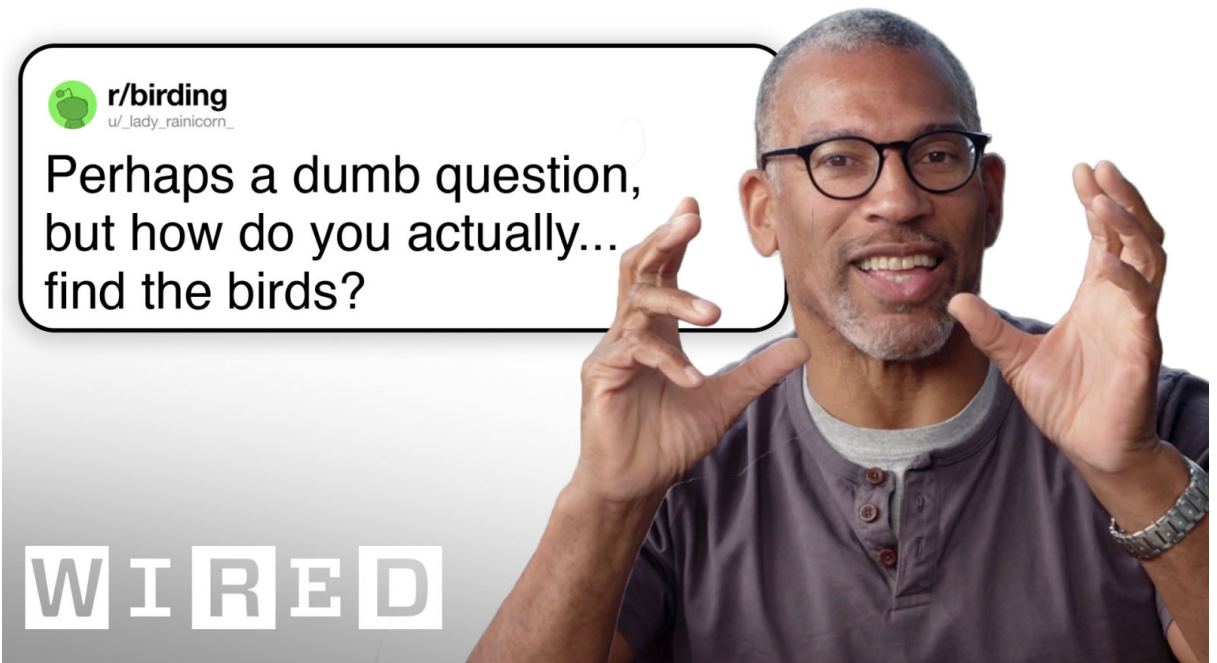

icon

icon

icon

icon

icon

•
icon

---

Source: <https://www.wired.com/?p=2171700>