

All roads lead back to Wuhan... Xiaoruizhi Science and Technology Company

As our readers know from our investigation into Hainan Xiandun Technology Development Company, the Intrusion Truth team have become quite adept at spotting a fishy front company when we see one.

Typically, these are ‘companies’ with a generic-sounding ‘technology’ name and a minimal online presence. They often post adverts on university websites looking for graduates with offensive cyber skills and, very importantly, foreign language expertise. The language of the adverts is vague, and often recycled from other, similar adverts posted online. The front companies provide contact details which just don’t seem to add up – such as numbers shared by other businesses. So, when we began investigating Wuhan Xiaoruizhi Science and Technology Company, it soon became clear that we were onto a winner.

We started with a 2017 job advert posted by the School of Computer and Information Engineering, Hubei University.

Looking for a number of software and system development engineers, Wuhan Xiaoruizhi describes itself as working in the ‘network security field’, and being vaguely located ‘near Wuhan Optics Valley’. Prospective applicants should be proficient in C and C++, scripting languages such as python, JavaScript and php, as well as IDA and OD. They should be familiar with automated testing processes, and web frameworks. Oh, and they must be au-fait with vulnerability mining. In fact, vulnerability mining is so important to Wuhan Xiaoruizhi, in this small university flyer, it is mentioned no less than three times.

A further search of Wuhan Xiaoruizhi reveals another advert posted on a university jobs site – the College of Foreign Languages at Huazhong Agricultural University. This time, Xiaoruizhi is looking for English majors to become analysts who will be responsible for ‘information collection, processing and text editing’ in Chinese and English.

Xiaoruizhi gives us an introduction to the company, which is committed to providing ‘information processing, industry research and big data analysis’ for customers, which include ‘relevant government departments’. We also get to know more about the company’s ‘ethical research and consulting team’, ‘win-win approach’ and its ‘concept of integrity-based innovation’. Only the company isn’t that innovative – nor does it have much integrity: such wording appears to be a word-for word copy of a description from another company’s job advert in Shenzhen. Shenzhen Prothinker

So what is it about Shenzhen Prothinker Consulting that got Wuhan Xiaoruizhi so inspired? Well, funnily enough, Shenzhen Prothinker was also on the lookout for English speakers with interests in politics, and graduates with computer-related majors. Hmm. 深圳市中安网域科技有限公司

合作项目: 高新企业认定

一句话: 我们找厚德集团申报了高新企业, 并最终拿到了高新企业证书, 还找他们申请了深圳市高层次人才认定证书, 还有相应的政府补贴, 都成功拿到了, 感谢他们。

Sounds...suspicious.

Let's park the shenanigans in Shenzhen for now and return to Wuhan. Who actually works at the Xiaoruizhi Science and Technology Company and what do they do? Unfortunately, this technology company doesn't have its own website, but we do have the name of the manager, Deng Zhiyong.

> Contact information

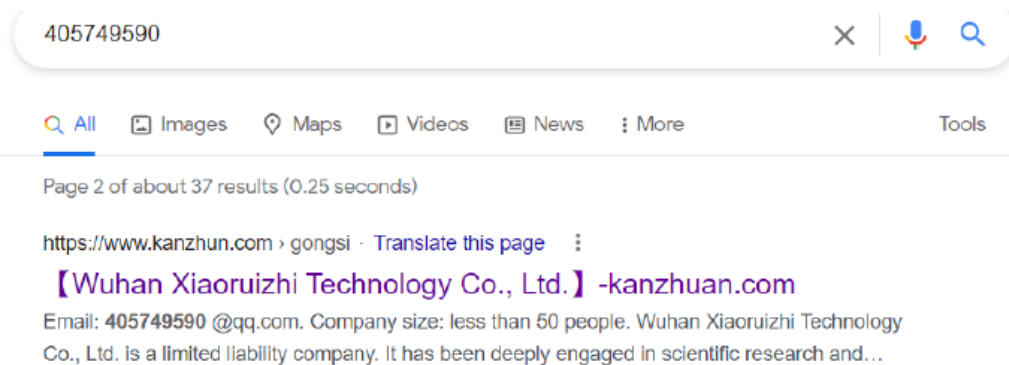

company	2nd Floor, No. 16, Torch Road, Miaoshan Development Zone, Jiangxia District, Wuhan, Wuhan
address:	manager:	Deng Zhiyong
Manager	13627291137 Not verified, for reference only, delete number
phone:	e-mail:	yongyan772@sohu.com
Postal Code:	430000

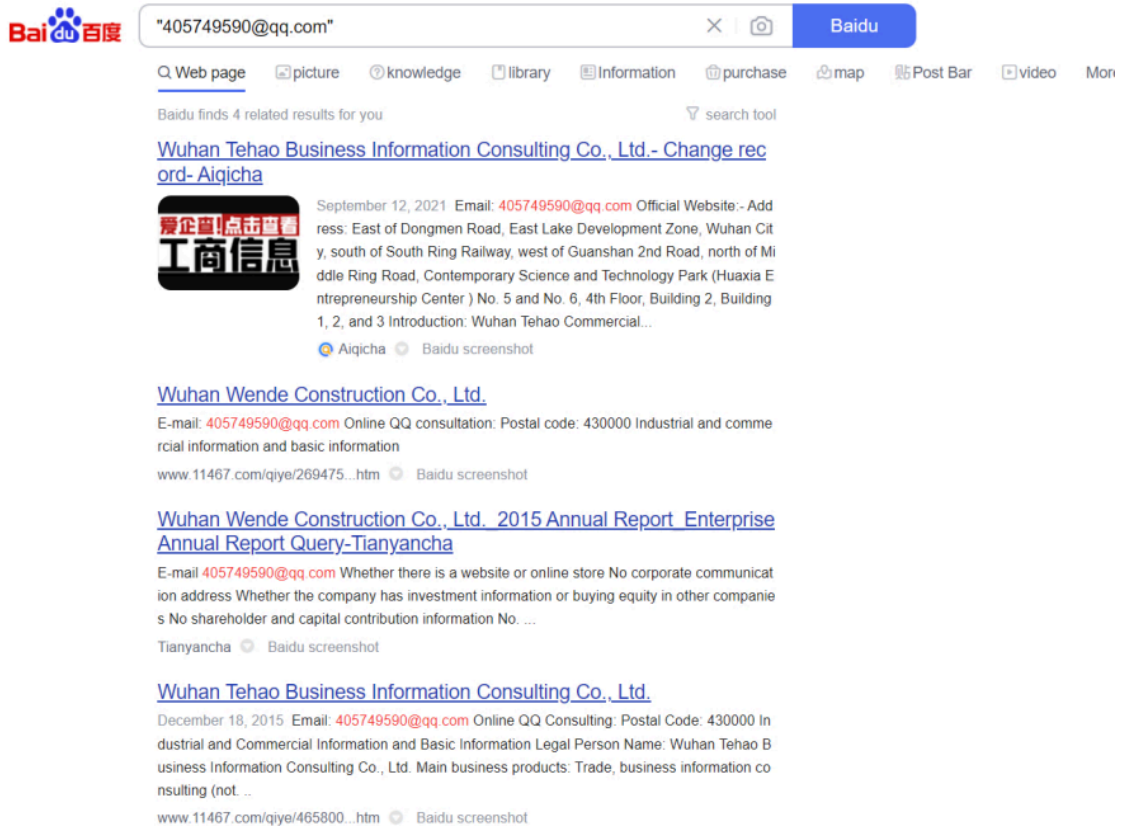

Deng is an interesting character. Aside from holding official titles at no less than three (!) government-affiliated organizations, (Director of the Foreign Exchange Center, Ministry of Science and Technology China; Director of the Hubei Wuhan China/Russian Technologic Cooperation Center; Chief of Department of Steelworks Management Administration, Dongxi, Wuhan) our friend Deng also seems to have a thing for Russian lasers.

Cooperation in the field of laser technologies. Development of scientific and technological cooperation in the field of industrial chemistry, photoelectronics and production of laser lamps. We will return to this in a later article. It's a wild ride.

A phone number which seems to be linked to Mr. Deng also seems to be used by both a construction company and a 'business information consulting company'. Quite the diverse business empire.

So, to summarize, we have a sketchy-looking company in Wuhan looking for vulnerability-miners and foreign language experts and linked to a phone number shared between many businesses. Lacking some imagination, the company decides to borrow language used by another sketchy-looking company in Shenzhen, which in turn appears to have some quite considerable overlap with an info-sec company dedicated to national defense and intelligence work. We also have government clients, a CEO with official PRC government titles, and a bonus link to a shifty hacking school.

You know the drill by now. If it walks like a duck and quacks like a duck.... (should we get that printed on merch?).

Beyond this, Wuhan Xiaoruzhi hasn't given us much to go on. So, it was time to take our search to the dark web.

Bingo.
