

Kaspersky official blog

Published: 2026-04-03 · Archived: 2026-04-05 19:58:24 UTC

Latest

CrystalX RAT can flip your screen and steal your crypto

The new CrystalX remote access Trojan looks like the prank viruses of the 90s on the surface, but it causes a lot more damage. It spies on all that's happening on your computer, steals cryptocurrency and accounts, and gives the attacker full control over your device. We break down how it works, and how to avoid becoming a victim.

Next Optimum

The smart path to stronger cybersecurity

Next Optimum

The smart path to stronger cybersecurity

Why AI agents need an iron curtain

Researcher Niels Provos' prototype IronCurtain architecture: a system designed to restrict the actions of AI agents through isolation and security policies.

Survey-based scams

Spammers have figured out how to hide links to fraudulent sites within surveys created on legitimate platforms. We're breaking down the ruse and sharing tips on how to avoid falling for it.

All you need to protect your smartphone

Reliable, easy to use security for Android

All you need to protect your smartphone

Reliable, easy to use security for Android

Gamers

Vulnerability in Unity game engine

Any game based on the popular Unity engine made in the last eight years can allow attackers to get into your computer or smartphone. Here's what to do about it.

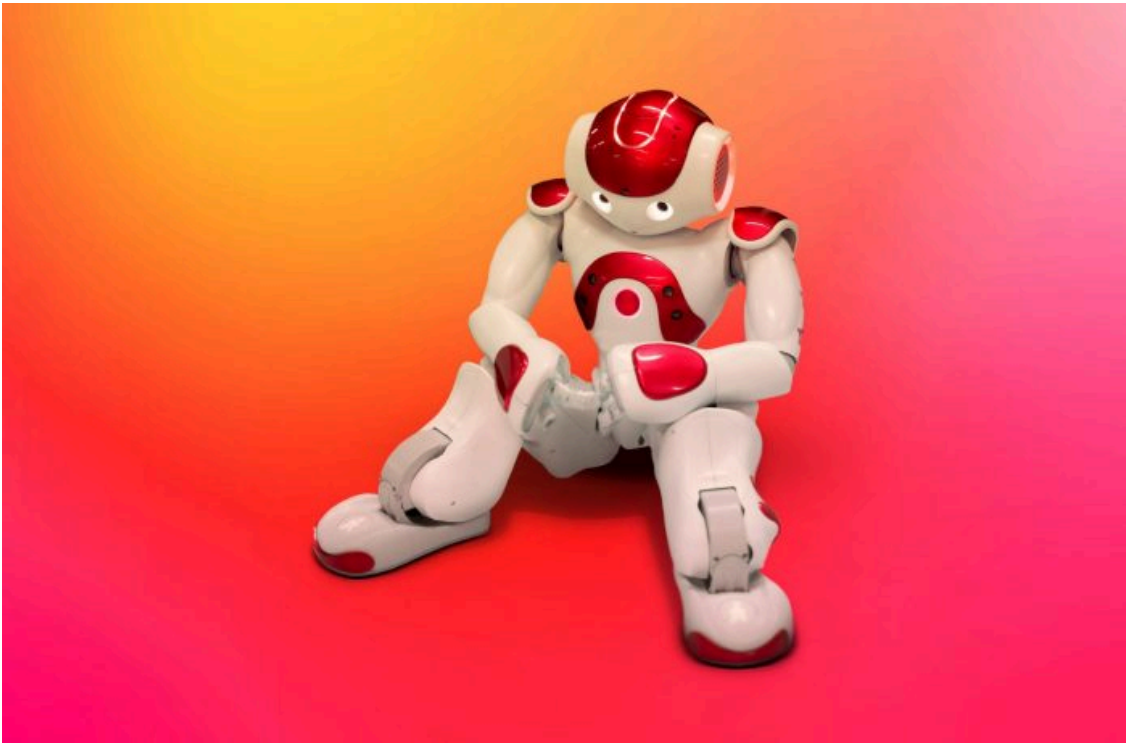

THE GAME "CASE 404" BEGINS! HELP ME INVESTIGATE – AND GET A PROMO CODE FOR KASPERSKY PREMIUM

Gamers beware: Trojans have invaded Steam

If you still think that Steam, Google Play, and the App Store are malware-free, then read this fascinating story about PirateFi and other hacker creations disguised as games.

How scammers attack young gamers

Autumn is here, kids are going back to school and also meeting up with friends in their favorite online games. With that in mind, we have just carried out one of our biggest ever studies of the threats young gamers are most likely to encounter.

Live hack: Apex Legends esports tournament scandal

Hackers have long been engaging with the gaming world: from cracking games and creating cheats, to, more recently, attacking esports players live during an Apex Legends tournament. Regarding the latter, we break down what happened and how it could have been avoided.

Next Optimum

Reliable, cost-effective security that grows with your business

Next Optimum

The smart path to stronger cybersecurity

Business

kaspersky

Kaspersky MITRE ATT&CK coverage map

Know their moves. Stop their game.

Threat actors are promoting pages containing malicious instructions for installing AI agents intended for workflow automation.

The advertisement features a dark background with a glowing blue hexagonal logo containing a white 'k' in the center. The logo is set against a backdrop of abstract, futuristic circuitry and glowing green points of light. The text is presented in a clean, white, sans-serif font.

Next Optimum

Reliable, cost-effective security that grows with your business

Next Optimum

The smart path to stronger cybersecurity

Tips

All you need to protect your smartphone

Reliable, easy to use security for Android

All you need to protect your smartphone

Reliable, easy to use security for Android

Source: <https://usa.kaspersky.com/blog/man-in-the-disk/16089/>